

Japan Value Equity SRI

January 2025

Strategy

SRI Strategy invests in Japanese equities which meet the criteria of ESG (Environmental, Social, Governance) management and investment value, and aims to achieve above benchmark return in the mid- to long-term. Our equity investment takes a bottom-up approach in which the Japanese equity research team analyzes intrinsic value of individual stocks and compares it with market price in order to identify undervalued stocks. ESG research is conducted by Sompo Risk Management, which is a leading company in domestic ESG research.

Market Review

The Japanese market ended January roughly unchanged MoM as positives, like retracted concerns of tariffs as US President Donald Trump did not implement them the moment he took office, and negatives, like concerns of a drop in demand for semiconductors following the release of a low-cost AI model from China, balanced out. The Securities & Commodities Futures and Banks sectors rose on the back of a BoJ rate hike and the Marine Transportation sector fell on a drop in expectations for heightened freight rates after strikes were avoided at US ports.

The market fell in the first half of the month as investors were negative on retreating expectations for rate cuts after both US jobs data and ISM Manufacturing PMI beat expectations. Despite heightened expectations for rate cuts on the back of US CPI not meeting expectations, tighter restrictions on US semiconductor exports to China then weighed on share prices. The market then rose through the rest of the month despite the release of Chinese startup DeepSeek's low-cost AI model temporarily acting as a drag by igniting concerns over the future of demand for semiconductors, concerns over Trump tariffs abated as he did not immediately implement any after taking office.

Attribution Analysis

While sector allocation contributed to performance, stock selection detracted. In sector allocation, overweighting (OW) of Banks and underweighting (UW) of Wholesale and Insurance contributed to performance, while UW of Other Prod and Securities and OW of Foods detracted. In stock selection, OW of Fujitsu General, Nomura Research Institute, and Toray contributed to performance, while OW of Nidec and Murata Manufacturing and UW of Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group detracted. Last month we increased holdings of Daikin Industries, artience, and OSG and decreased holdings of Toray, Shimizu Corporation, and NTT.

Outlook

We expect the market will face heavy upside resistance over the near term.

Japanese corporate earnings will likely grow on the back of a recovery in domestic real wages, a cyclical recovery to the manufacturing sector, and capital efficiency improvement measures implemented by companies following pressure from the Tokyo Stock Exchange (TSE). Share prices do not look overvalued given current general valuation metrics such as forward P/E. However, downward pressure on share prices will likely increase because of concerns of increased tariffs from the US and worries that JPY will appreciate on the back of divergent monetary policy between the US and Japan. That said, it is difficult to envision a large correction to the Japanese market given strong equity demand from the high level of large-scale share buybacks seen recently and the BoJ's relatively accommodative monetary policy compared to the US and Europe.
